"We, the People."

The Register's assumption of virtue, and its claims, in effect, made that the Democratic party management in West Virginia is too pure and undefiled to make use of money for a political campaign will cause a broad smile to overspread the countenances of most people. On the strength of an alleged "authentic communication," it declares that the Republicans have a "corruption fund," with which it is going to buy all the voters it can, while the pure, virtuous Democratic politicians, who were never known to use anything but moral suasion in convincing voters, and who would run at the very sight of a campaign fund, and cry: "Get thee behind me, Satan," are going, each and every man of them, to constitute themselves a committee to see to it that not one cent of money is to be collected for expenses.

The bills for polling counties, for public meetings, for printing, and for all other sorts of expenses, may go begging for some one to pay them—for everybody knows that the Democratic campaign committee wouldn't accept a dollar for such a purpose or for themselves. Every man of them is serving for pure patriotism, and not one would even accept an office for a reward, not to mention anything else.

"The Democracy is the people, and the Democracy's fight is the people's fight," says the Register. Everybody has heard of those famous three London tailors who resolved that "we, the people," etc., and through the Register we learn that the only people in the United States are Democrats, while the 7,107,908 men who voted for President McKinley two years ago are all "corruptionists," and have no interest in the country. In West Virginia the 104,000 Republican voters, (in 1896), are all the same way, and only the Democrats are the pure and undefiled ones, who hate the sight of a dollar so much that they want its value reduced to 45 cents.

The Democratic committees are all doing their work and paying their own expenses out of their private purses for pure patriotism, and any person who says there is a campaign fund insults every Democratic politician in the state. That's the Register's logic. Those who are candidates for the United States senate are remaining quietly at home, and have their money tucked away in stockings, under the floor. The eight thousand dollars the Register has discovered was sent to our state by the Republican national committee is to be used to distribute among one hundred thousand Republicans, giving them each eight cents apiece. We violate no confidence in thus agreeing with the Register's logic.

In the meantime, let the only pure and virtuous Democracy speak in stentorian tones in rebuke against the party that pays its legitimate expenses for the management of its campaigns. If any one should ascertain that Col. McGraw, or Judge Johnston, or Mr. Neal, or Mr. Blair, or Mr. Faulkner, or Mr. MacCorkle, or any other Democrat who is running for office, has contributed so much as a dollar to the Democratic campaign fund, spot him at once as a corruptionist, for the Democratic party is opposed to anything of the sort. This also is Register logic, for the Democracy runs purely on its virtue, and if it cannot get votes without an organization which will pay its own expenses it doesn't deserve the offices. Let the order go out that the Democratic campaign fund, however small, must be dumped into a well, while our neighbor continues its daily essays on Peckanlian politics and journalism.

The British-French Crisis.

The situation between England and France is at a most critical stage. Whether war will result or not is a matter for speculation, but certain it is, that the chances that it will be better to-day than they were a week ago. The aroused martial feeling in England, the tone of the British press, and the significant utterances of the British statesmen, while that country is quietly but vigorously placing itself in a position to strike at any moment, all mean something besides what we would, in this country, call "a mere game of bluff." There is a gravity in the situation which precludes a light treatment of it.

The crisis is very little short of a formal declaration of war, and it will call for the wisest and most discreet statesmanship to avert a calamity. The two governments are in such positions that it is impossible for either to back down—committed so by their respective premiers. On the one side the French minister has taken a position regarding the Fashoda affair from which he cannot recede in safety, while the British government, having demanded the withdrawal of the French commander, Marchand, from Fashoda, cannot do otherwise than remain firm.

There is an indication that the French are hopeful that some sort of compromise may be arranged with Lord Salisbury, but the feeling in England is all against such a consideration. Nothing but the granting of the British demand to evacuate Fashoda will open the way to an amicable settlement of the difference. If the London Times correctly reflects British sentiment, and it doubtless does, judging from other expressions quoted, there is nothing in the British position which demands a recession. The Times declares that "it is not we who are trying to humiliate France, but it is France that seeks to put a great humiliation upon us. We have beaten Khalfia and have effectively occupied the provinces he usurped. We are now asked to clear out at the orders of an exploring party of Frenchmen, who owe their escape from destruction to our military success; or, if we are kindly permitted not to clear out, we are to pay a compensation for our title to what we have wrested from the Khalfia. This is not a thing which we can attempt to discuss upon any such high-handed summons. We are there in effective occupation, and there we intend to remain."

This doubtless expresses not only the popular feeling in England, but the attitude of the British government. In the meantime the preparations for war in a time of strained peace go on in both countries, and the nations of Europe and the remainder of the world are watching the developments of the case with increasing interest. While the Russian sympathy seems to be with France, the general feeling in most of the European countries is that the French position on the Fashoda question is not tenable, and that there is no reason why England should be interfered with in the fruits of her victory over the Khalfia. A war between England and France would be of grave and momentous importance. Coming events will be of absorbing interest.

A Wise Suggestion.

The war department will be wise to heed the suggestion from the American military commission in Havana not to send the army of occupation to Cuba at this time, but to wait a few weeks until the climatic conditions are safer. The commission states that no additional troops will be needed there before December, and that the delay will not only better insure the healthfulness of the soldiers, but the time can be utilized in bettering the camps and in preparing all of them for the reception of the troops.

If the troops are not needed immediately, the idea of holding them back until safe quarters, with proper sanitary equipments, are provided, and until the dangers from the climate are passed, is a good one, and will certainly avoid the evil results which would follow an unnecessary action before these conditions are made perfect. There is no occasion for rushing the troops into a climate to which they are unused, as there was during the war, and if the bad results of so doing can be averted without embarrassing the programme, it should be done.

A dispatch from Romney gives an account of an assault on a colored man by a Democratic leader, and chairman of the Democratic committee, after his denial of a charge that he was distributing Republican money among colored voters. The colored man, who dared to deny a charge which could not be true, since he had no interest in the campaign, being a resident of Maryland, was struck twice for his audacity, and showed a creditable disposition by treating his assailant with contempt. Col. McGraw should tame down a few of his pugilistic lieutenants. There are a good many colored men in the Second district, and there is no record that money has been necessary to buy their votes for the Republican party. The Democratic official who assaulted William Cooper at Romney assumed too much.

The rare spectacle of the German naval ensign with the cross beside the Turkish crescent was witnessed on the occasion of the visit of the German emperor. This is the first time since the conquest of Constantinople that flags with crosses on them have been officially raised there, and the incident, considering the trend of events, is rightfully regarded as significant. The Kaiser's visit to Constantinople wasn't a mere social affair.

An increase in our export trade in the past decade of 30 per cent certainly should be gratifying enough to Americans who have been fearful all the time that our wise tariff policy was shutting us out of the "markets of the world."

France has the sympathy of the Russian bear. The British lion isn't worrying very much about it, and is maintaining his dignity and watchfulness.

THE SECOND DISTRICT.

Great Republican Victory Predicted.
Dayton's Re-election, Sure.
Special Dispatch to the Intelligence.

PIEDMONT, W. Va., Oct. 23.—The outlook in this congressional district for the re-election of Congressman Dayton, could not be better. There is no local breach to be healed in Mineral county, and from my observation of the political situation Alston G. Dayton will have a greater majority this year than he had in 1896, when it was 2,251. Mr. John G. Hoffman, Jr., of Gorman, in Grant county, and many other gentlemen who are familiar with the situation, fully coincide with this view of the political situation in the Second district. We have had several "roorbacks" in circulation in this district, the alleged G. A. R. circular, for instance, and the "character circular" of Judge Goff and Hon. John W. Mason. The Reymann litigation has not been given publicity; some one ought to send this latter to Chairman Cornwell, to be sent out as educational literature. The "till hunt" is progressing in a satisfactory manner, and on the night of the 8th of November the reports from the good county of Mineral will show that her voters are "upward and onward" and will do nothing to retard progress, prosperity and protection.

Prof. C. F. Hahn's majority in '96 for legislature was 249, and President McKinley's was 241. With a decrease of 10 per cent of the vote this year Mineral county will place herself on record as in favor of Republican measures to the extent of 309 votes. We are not building political air castles, but our figures are based on solid facts, by induction and deduction, and by close observation and some experience.

General Charles H. Grosvenor, of Ohio, and Hon. John M. Reynolds, of Pennsylvania, the latter a former Democrat and first assistant secretary of the department of the interior, are expected to speak in Piedmont before the campaign closes.

Senator Elkins is doing yeoman work all over the state and his speeches contain sound political wisdom, which take root, and is growing.

The Republicans all over the state need not worry about the Second district, and in fact, there is no doubt but that West Virginia will be represented in the next Congress by a solid Republican delegation.

TART TACTICS.

Employed by McGraw's Henchmen in the Second District.

SPECIAL DISPATCH to the Intelligence.
ROMNEY, W. Va., Oct. 23.—There occurred Thursday, on the street in this place, a scene that clearly shows to what desperate straits the Democracy of this county and district are resorting, and what great love they have for the colored voter. William Cooper, a colored man who is in business in Cumberland, came here to spend a few days with friends. The Democrats heard that he was sent here by T. G. Pownall with campaign money to distribute among the colored voters.

William B. Cornwell, of the Democratic committee, contacted John T. McGraw's campaign met Cooper on the street and accused him of having been sent here with corruption funds. Cooper denied the charge, whereupon Cornwell struck him twice. He said to the credit of the colored man, who is a very intelligent fellow, he did not resent the assault. The incident is having an effect, not only among the colored voters, but with the Democrats, not calculated on by Mr. Cornwell.

The prospects grow brighter here each day for a strong Republican vote on the 8th of November and many gold Democrats who were with us two years ago will be with the G. O. P. again this year, and some are even now pronounced Republicans.

Worse than Soldering.

Cleveland Leader: "Poor fellow," one of them cried, "how can he look like that?" "Yes, and how sad," said the other. "You would think he had not had a meal for a week." "And there is a wild look in his eyes that was probably left by the fever." "Ah, it is pitiful! To think that we, the richest nation on earth, should treat our brave defenders in such a way!"

"Really, it almost makes me ashamed to be a soldier," said one. "My heart is pained with pity. I must speak to him, and offer him assistance if he will take it. Poor, proud fellow. I hardly know how to begin."

Then she approached the unfortunate man, smiled sympathetically, and held out her hand. He took it and looked at her as if trying to remember who she was.

"I hope," she said in trembling tones, while the tears sprang to her eyes, "that you will consent to let me help you. I must do so. I should feel that I had been remiss in my duty if I didn't. Will you come home with me and accept of my hospitality, or would you prefer money, so that you may consult your own convenience and your own tastes in this matter?"

"Madame," he replied, "I—I am afraid I don't quite understand you." "Poor fellow," she whispered to her companion, "he wanders in his mind. The fever has left him in a deranged condition."

Then addressing him again she said: "You have suffered much—ah, I can see it in your face."

"Yes," he replied, "I admit it."

"What regiment were you with, and why did they send you away from the hospital before you had recovered?" "Regiment 'Hospital'!" he echoed. "I haven't been in any hospital, and I wasn't with any regiment."

"What!" she exclaimed, "aren't you one of those unfortunate soldiers who suffered such horrible treatment in the fever camps?"

"No, I suppose I look it, though. The trouble with me is that I got left out suddenly about a week ago and my wife's been trying to do the cooking since then. I appreciate—"

Wheat $3 a Bushel.

Some farmers are holding their wheat because they think the price will go to $2 a bushel. The price, however, may go down instead of up, and thus great losses will follow delay in selling. In all matters of delay are dangerous, particularly so in sickness. At the first sign of biliousness, dyspepsia, indigestion or constipation cure yourself with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Don't wait for your condition to improve itself, for it is apt to get worse still.
